Dear Commissioner Ann C. Fisher,

I would like to solicit your assistance in not instituting the proposed changes to the United States Postal Service, USPS, by the current Chief Executive Officer Louis DeJoy. The following items constitute some of the proposed policies and procedures CEO DeJoy seeks to institute to the detriment of the overall proficiency of the USPS.

DeJoy seeks to do the following:

1. Roll back consumer mail services
2. Discontinue the use of mail services utilizations air planes and substituting more trucks for long haul delivery of mail.
3. Close postal offices
4. Reduce employees work hours and deliveries
5. Privatizing basic mail services to other organizations, possibly some under his control/ownership.

It should be readily apparent that CEO Mr. DeJoy may have a conflict of interest and have an ulterior motive for the proposed changes She seeks to institute. Is there anything the Postal Regulatory Commission can do to thwart Mr. DeJoy's overt attempts to dismantle and replace the United States Postal System, with what? Mr. DeJoy has yet to demonstrate he has the mental and emotional acuity for the job of CEO of the United States Postal Service.

Sincerely,

Yvonne Walker
